

To whom it may concern:

I am pleased to write this letter to recommend Patnam Madhu for getting admission to your university to pursue his master's degree. Knowing his strengths and capabilities after working with him, I am confident and strongly recommend him for his admission.

I am currently Project Manager at Brillio with 9+ years of experience in the IT Industry. I've known Madhu as his Manager for the past year since he joined Brillio. He began his tenure as a member of MEC team, where we dealt with end-user issues and delivered requirements in a timely manner. His job entails developing Backend for B2B applications in Springboot and reaching clients aspects. He accomplished this work with ease using his programming skills and demonstrated a level of professionalism that spoke to his natural talent for his chosen field of interest. At the same time, he was working on these activities, he was involved in a few cloud migration projects and successfully contributed to their timely completion. He has augmented his thinking to be more broad-based while keeping the client's business objectives in mind.

Throughout his time here being a developer, he demonstrated a strong work ethic, a never say 'NO' attitude, and a great deal of dedication, which led to his success in many of the tasks he worked on. However, he encountered difficulties while performing his job at first, but he quickly learned from his more experienced teammates and adapted to the situation, successfully overcoming those obstacles. The fact that he has worked on multiple aspects of the application demonstrates his versatility and eagerness to learn about new industry developments. After seeing this kind of work and attitude from him he was given a chance to lead a project team which deals on Backend Development activities. Over there he has shown a great sense of maturity with respect to following up on the issues and being responsive towards situations that require immediate attention.

Eventually, He is one of the few people I would prefer to have on my team in a crunch situation. Despite his academic background, he has a strong practical side, making him one of the most well-rounded and promising professionals. And I strongly advise his acceptance to your university for completing his master's degree and advance in his career. If I can be of any further assistance regarding this candidate, please contact me via email.
